TAKE STEPS FOR TRAINING HERE

War Department Communicates with College Authorities Regarding the Sending of Regular Army Men here.

President Granville of the college this morning received from Adjutant General G. W. Read an acknowledgment of Dr. Granville's recent communication asking under what conditions the War Department would furnish the college with an instructor in military drill and the needed equipment. The reply is as follows:

Your communication of June 8th, inclosing bulletin relative to Pennsylvania College, has been received and you are informed that regulations governing the establishment and maintenance of units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps will shortly be issued by the War Department.

Until these regulations are published, it will be impossible to give you any definite information relative to the detail of an officer or decide matters relative to the issue of equipment until you have agreed to the regulations as issued by the Secretary of War, pursuant to the law. A copy of these regulations will be furnished you as soon as published.

Your interest in this important matter of preparedness is highly appreciated.

The college boys showed great interest during the past year in a military drill system and a petition, signed by practically every male student, asking for such drill was presented to the faculty and board of trustees. Both these bodies approved the plan on condition that the War Department would provide the instructor and equipment. It is thought that the faculty may make this obligatory on all Freshmen who do not take regular part in some athletic sport.

MANY GATHERINGS

Announce Dates for Pen Mar Reunions this Summer.

Reunions of the Reformed, Lutheran and Presbyterian churches, Odd Fellows and Knights of Columbus are among the big events scheduled for Pen Mar Park this summer. Also, the Missionary Conference to be held at the Park beginning July 17, and continuing to July 24, will be a matter of great interest in church circles. Last year the conference was held at Pen Mar and was highly successful.

Not in the history of the park have so many excursions by church and business organizations and lodges been booked for Pen Mar as this summer. The following have thus far been scheduled:

Reformed Church, July 20. Lutheran Church, July 27. Presbyterian Church, August 3. Odd Fellows of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and District of Columbia, August 10. Knights of Columbus, Baltimore, August 17. Grace Lutheran League, July 26. Everybody's Day, August 31.

SHAFFER-RUPP HOME WEDDING

Miss Helen Rupp, of Gettysburg, and Rev. David Shaffer, Young Lutheran Minister, Married at Home of Bride.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Rupp, on West Middle street, at two o'clock this afternoon, their daughter, Miss Helen E. Rupp, and Rev. David L. Shaffer, of Homestead, were married by Rev. Joseph B. Baker.

Before the wedding ceremony Miss Ivy Tawney played Mendelssohn's "Spring Song", "Traumerei", and "O Promise Me." As the bride and bridegroom, unattended, descended the stairway which was beautifully trimmed with honeysuckle, Miss Tawney played the Lohengrin March. The ceremony took place under an arch of pink rambler roses and honeysuckle vines. The single ring service was used.

The bride's gown was of white chiffon poplin, draped with shadow lace. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. After the ceremony an informal reception was held and at four o'clock the newlyweds left for Johnstown, the home of Rev. Mr. Shaffer's parents, with whom they will spend a week before going on to Homestead, where he is pastor of Messiah Lutheran church.

The bride has been one of the most popular young ladies of her set. She has been a member of St. James Church Choir for a number of years, and was very active in the work of that congregation. The high esteem in which she is held by her many friends was evidenced by many beautiful wedding gifts. Rev. Mr. Shaffer is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam B. Shaffer, of Johnstown. He was graduated from Gettysburg College in 1913 and from the Seminary this year. He is a member of the Druid fraternity. During his college course he was active in track athletics and was a member of the team which established a record at the Pennsylvania Relays.

Among the out of town guests here for the wedding were the following: Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Shaffer, daughter and son; Mrs. Nevin J. Friedline, Miss Lillian M. Shaffer, and Martin L. Shaffer, of Johnstown; Dr. and Mrs. Charles I. Shaffer, of Ralplinton; Mrs. A. A. Barnett and Mrs. James Shaffer, of Sipesville; Mr. and Mrs. George F. Shaffer, of Jenner; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rupp, and Miss Clara Bester, of Hagerstown.

AUTOMOBILE RUN FOR CHAUTAUQUA

Expect to Send out Two Different Sections to Do Publicity Work in Connection with Coming Summer Attraction.

Invitation is extended generally for owners of automobiles to take part in the Chautauqua booster run scheduled to take place on Friday morning. The committee in charge has even been thoughtful enough to allow the drivers their choice of two routes.

The first route is from Gettysburg to Bendersville, Arendtsville, Cash-town, Fairfield and home. The second, provided sufficient cars take part to comprise a second section, will go to Emmitsburg, Littlestown, McSherrytown, New Oxford and home. The start is to be made from Centre Square at 9 o'clock. Provided the weather is inclement on Friday morning the run will be postponed until the following Monday.

Owners of cars will, of course, invite the guests they desire to accompany them. It is suggested to the committee that they arrive at the starting point some time in advance of the hour scheduled to start the run, in order that they may have time to complete the decoration of their cars and assure themselves of the final direction for the route.

CARLISLE HOLDS PITCHER EVENT

Monument to Heroine of Monmouth is Dedicated, with Governor and Other Prominent Men in Attendance. Parade.

To-day there was unveiled in Carlisle a monument in memory of Molly Pitcher, the "heroine of Monmouth," before an assembly comprising State and national officials, representatives of leading patriotic organizations and suffrage clubs from all over the East. The tablet was designed by J. Otto Schweizer.

The unveiling ceremonies occurred directly over Molly Pitcher's grave in what is known as the "Old Graveyard." The principal address at the unveiling was made by Governor Brumbaugh while the presentation by the State was made by Senator Snyder, Republican nominee for Auditor General.

Roy L. Schuyler, president of the State Commission directed to honor Molly Pitcher, presided at the meeting which took place immediately after an imposing parade of military and patriotic organizations.

Rev. A. N. Hagerty, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Carlisle, delivered the invocation after which Senator Snyder presented the unveiled monument. It was accepted by Edward W. Biddle, of Carlisle, after which followed Governor Brumbaugh's address. Fifteen thousand people sang the Star Spangled Banner in massed chorus to conclude the ceremony.

The parade was held early in the afternoon.

WAR IN MEXICO
MEANS LONG STAYMany in Favor of Maintaining Protectorate Over Country.

MAY ALSO ANNEX TERRITORY

Underwood Points Out That American People Are Unwilling to Spill Blood and Spend Money With Purely Altruistic Motives. In View—Must Continue to Protect Border.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, June 28.—[Special.]—If Mexico loses territory, if that country becomes subject to the United States to any extent, the blame will rest upon those Mexican leaders who have forced the crisis. It will rest primarily upon Carranza and Villa, two leaders that our government have tried to aid. It will rest upon those who hoped to unite Mexico by a common war against the United States, the leader of which might become the Mexican dictator.

That Mexico will lose territory there seems to be little doubt, or that some sort of protectorate will follow seems inevitable. Senator Underwood of Alabama, who is a wise observer, says that the American people will not fight a purely altruistic contest in Mexico.

Will Want Results.

"A war simply to secure peace in that country," he said, "to establish a stable government and then retire without anything to show for our efforts save the purely altruistic, will not satisfy the American people. Where American blood has been shed and American money spent there will be a demand for some recompense, and it will be the annexation of adjacent territory or maintaining a protectorate so as to insure peace for our people who live along the border and have property interests in Mexico."

Senator Underwood voices a prevailing idea among many men. Intervention means a long stay in Mexico.

Senators Were There.

The prominent part which United States senators take in the national conventions is an interesting feature of the great quadrennial contests. At Chicago Senator Harding of Ohio presided over the convention; Senator Lodge of Massachusetts was chairman of the committee on platform; Senator Smoot was chairman of credentials and an important figure in the whole proceedings, as he was also chairman of the committee which negotiated with the Progressives. Senator Borah of Idaho was a member of that committee and made speeches in both the Republican and Progressive conventions.

Weeks, Cummins, La Follette and Sherman were candidates before the convention. Others who loomed up considerably or were delegates were Brady of Idaho, Catron and Fall of New Mexico, Kenyon of Iowa, Penrose and Oliver of Pennsylvania, Lippitt of Rhode Island, Sutherland of Utah and Wadsworth of New York.

Democratic Senators.

At St. Louis James of Kentucky was permanent chairman, Stone of Missouri was chairman of the resolutions committee, while others who took prominent parts were: Hoiles of New Hampshire, Walsh of Montana, Hughes of New Jersey, Kern and Taggart of Indiana, Johnson of Maine, Saulsbury of Delaware, Martin and Swanson of Virginia, Lewis of Illinois, Owen and Gore of Oklahoma, Newlands and Pittman of Nevada, Phelan of California, Smith of South Carolina, Pomerene of Ohio, Reed of Missouri, Williams and Vanderman of Mississippi.

Fattening the Record.

The Congressional Record has been extended a great deal in order to make ready for the campaign. Almost every political speech and document bearing on politics has been printed to be used under the free franking privilege in case it is considered good campaign material.

Hampton Moore Protests.

Congressman Moore of Philadelphia is in a protesting mood. "I enter my protest against this 'government by rule' or even by unanimous consent agreement," he told the house recently. There are quite a number of other members who have made similar protests, but business in the house goes on pretty much the same way. Just at that particular time Moore was protesting against the agreements which Minority Leader Mann had made and was somewhat inclined to rebel against his party leader.

Russell For Pensions.

Congressman Russell of Missouri, who has a great deal to do in handling pension legislation, reviewed the pension work of the session in a recent speech, showing that much had been done to take care of the old soldiers of the civil war. He has been an earnest worker to this end. In the course of his remarks he said that he had a brother who fought on the Confederate side. It frequently happened that families were divided in border states.

Sharp Contests.

There are some sharp contests between the houses and between congress and the administration, but none quite so bitter as that over the post-office appropriation bill. The department has been insisting upon legislation which has been resisted by the senate with a great deal of vigor. This bill may delay adjournment.

HEADLIGHTS MORE POWERFUL.

Railroad locomotives in road service between sunset and sunrise are required by an order of the Interstate commerce commission to have a head light sufficiently powerful to enable persons in the locomotive cab to see an object the size of a man at a distance of 1,000 feet or more ahead in normal weather conditions.

Locomotives required to run backward in road service must have a rear headlight of the same type, and those used in yard or terminal stations will be required to carry two lights strong enough to make a man size object visible at a distance of 300 feet or more.

The order is made applicable to all new steam locomotives put in service after Oct. 1 next and to others given a general overhauling before that date. All engines now in service must be equipped with the lights not later than 1920.

SAY CARRANZA

PUTS BLAME ON U. S.

President Wilson Will Call on Congress to Act at Once if Mexicans Refuse to Release Troopers.

Washington, June 28.—Eliseo Arredondo, ambassador designate, is said to have received official word from Mexico City that the demand of the United States for the release of the American aviators taken prisoner during the fight at Carrizal was refused by General Carranza, head of the de facto government of Mexico. Such a reply, it is asserted, can result only in war, as President Wilson has made all arrangements to lay the situation before congress, and to ask that positive action be taken to defend the interests of the nation.

Senator Arredondo, according to the report, has been advised that the reply from Carranza already has been started on its way to Washington. He is quoted as having told Latin-American diplomats that he expected to receive it soon.

That the reply would be a refusal had also been indicated by dispatches from Galveston and from Mexico City, and by a statement from Ignacio Calderon, minister from Bolivia, who has been foremost in the movement to have Central and South American republics mediate the differences between the United States and Mexico.

The Mexico City and Galveston reports said that Carranza had rejected flatly the demand of the United States, voiced in Secretary of State Lansing's note, Sunday, which not only called for the release of the prisoners, but also insisted that the de facto government announce its intention toward the American troops which now are in Mexico.

Senator Calderon, speaking of the situation, said: "The mob spirit seems to be influencing President Carranza and his advisers. While I have no details of the note, I have heard that the reply, instead of being conciliatory, will declare that the United States is to blame, and will adopt a position which, I fear, will leave the Washington government no alternative except to use force."

In the meantime, the president has been shaping his plans so that a refusal will be met promptly and in a decisive fashion.

It was asserted in White House circles that the president would not wait more than forty-eight hours at the most, before calling congress in joint session to act.

The crisis has reached such a stage that leaders in the house are reported to have made a tentative draft of a resolution to declare "through the acts of the Mexican government a state of war exists." The draft, it is understood, is to be submitted to the president.

STOP ARMED POSSE

Galveston, Tex., June 28.—Carranzistas at Tampico are holding W. H. Greene, general superintendent of the Huasteca oil company, as a hostage, pending the payment of a large sum of money, according to Greene's wife, who arrived here.

Mrs. Greene said her husband was "arrested" when he attempted to leave the country with other Americans.

Boy, Seventeen, in Guard.

Chester, Pa., June 28.—When George W. Loveland, of Edinboro, heard that his sixteen-year-old son had enlisted in the national guard to fight in Mexico, he hurried to Chester and offered himself as a substitute, but was too late, his son having left with the troops, giving his age as twenty-one.

Judge Gray May Run for Senator.

Two in Juarez Jail.

Columbus, N. M., June 28.—Four more members of the Tenth Cavalry, who survived the massacre at Carrizal, have been picked up and returned to the American expedition, it is reported.

The colored troopers were in a pitiful condition, half dead from hunger and thirst.

Two colored troopers, ragged and half dead from hardships, are lodged in jail at Juarez, having been brought from Guzman, where they were captured by de facto government troops. They are believed to be survivors of the Carrizal engagement.

Will Parker, owner of Parker's ranch, thirty-five miles southwest of Hachita, N. M., and his wife were murdered, presumably by Mexican bandits, according to information received by relatives.

American cavalry already has started in pursuit of the murderers, and if necessary will cross the border. At the time of the murder the bandits ran off approximately twenty-five horses, which military officials believe will assist them in finding the trail.

The bodies of Parker and his wife are said to have been found by employees at the ranch house. Parker's place was visited several days ago by Mexican bandits, and a number of horses and cattle were taken. A troop of cavalry followed their trail, but did not cross the border.

VOTE BAN ON JOB-HOLDERS

President of Pennsylvania Bar Argues for Limitation of Electorate.

Bedford Springs, Pa., June 28.—A total disfranchisement of the payroll vote, from the president down to street-sweepers; condemnation of the non-partisan ballot law; recommendation of an appointive judiciary; a limitation of judicial powers in declaring acts of the legislature unconstitutional; proposition of a condensed legislature of ten senators and twenty representatives; checks upon executive aggression and usurpation—were some of the points in the address of President George B. Gordon, of Pittsburgh, at the opening session of the twenty-second annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Bar Association at Bedford Springs.

The subject of the address was "Some Aspects of State Constitutional Law," and consisted of a series of suggestions and running comment as to possible constitutional changes which would be desirable and would receive substantial public support.

SAYS ARMY IS

To Establish Censorship to Control Troop Movements.

QUIET ALONG THE FRONTIER

The Militia Will Soon Begin to Arrive at Border to Relieve the Regulars for Active Service.

San Antonio, Tex., June 28.—Major General Frederick Funston and his staff searched every report from all border stations for signs of hostility by Carranza's army that is pouring into northern Mexico, but the real work at department headquarters was the supervision of the multitudinous details incident to preparing the American force for efficient action.

"If war has got to come, I would just as soon it came tomorrow as not," the general said. "By that time, we shall be as well prepared as possible. Some militia will be on the border, and the rest on the way. I am sure the regulars are as ready as they ever will be. I have no fear of the outcome."

The confidence expressed by the American commander was reflected by his subordinates. Reports that troops of General Jacinto Trevino and Brigadier General John J. Pershing already had clashed at Villa Ahumada were received without anxiety. The reports, while unconfirmed, caused no surprise, as this place is expected to be the scene of the first battle.

Reports from El Paso, Eagle Pass, Brownsville and other Texas posts indicated no aggression by Mexicans. Units of the American army have been stationed in such manner that almost instant action can be obtained by the commanding officer. There has been no relaxation of efforts to guard the border towns and ranches from bandits, but far more attention is being paid to marshaling the thousands of men along the border.

The situation opposite Naco, Ariz., where 1500 Mexican troops are being held on trains, aroused speculation, but General Funston announced that American officers were sure they had fathomed the design of this movement. Reinforcements were sent to the American force at Naco, and entrenchments have been thrown up.

Units of the national guard now moving throughout the United States are expected to begin arriving in Texas very soon. Where they will be stationed will not be made public, and in most cases those commanding the guardsmen have not been informed of their final destinations.

Some impatience was displayed at General Funston's headquarters that so much publicity already had been given to troop movements and it was indicated that a censorship, far reaching in its operation soon will be established.

Ambulance Company No. 6 and Field Hospital No. 6, both of the regular army, from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., has arrived.

The embargo against exportation of supplies into Mexico from the United States, already has affected the Mexican army, it is reported. It became known that the Mexican force recently left Nuevo Laredo because they could not get forage for their horses.

24 CAPTURED AT CARRIZAL

He said they are now held in the penitentiary at Chihuahua. There are twenty-one privates and two sergeants, colored, of the Tenth Cavalry, and one white interpreter. Two are slightly wounded, but they are recovering. They are being well treated.

"This is from a dying man. I fear the Lusitania has just been torpedoed and will soon sink; let the civilized world avenge the dastardly act. Alfred Vanderbilt."

PENNA. GUARDSMEN
OFF TO BORDER

First Brigade Leaves Mt. Gretna For El Paso, Tex.

Mt. Gretna, Pa., June 28.—The First Brigade, under command of Brigadier General Price, left for El Paso, Texas, today.

The route to be taken was announced as follows: By Philadelphia & Reading railway to Philadelphia, change at Wayne Junction to Baltimore & Ohio railroad, proceed to Twenty-fourth and Chestnut streets, where a stop will be made for lunch, according to present plans, then to Washington, thence to St. Louis, then to Dallas, Texas, and on to El Paso.

The work of mustering in and administering the oath still is proceeding, and will not be finished for some days. There are almost twice as many men in camp now as there was when the tented city formally was opened. Rookies are arriving on every train, and it was announced at division headquarters that fifty rookies had arrived for every company in the camp. That doesn't mean that each individual company has been strengthened by the addition of fifty recruits, as some have added more to their roster and some less.

Outside the First Brigade, there is bitter disappointment among the troops. Unless the war, if hostilities should be declared, is a more stubborn one than the guardsmen here believe, they think there is little likelihood of the other three brigades of the Pennsylvania troops ever getting farther from home than the concentration camp here.

New York Militia Go to Brownsville.

New York, June 28.—Two regiments of infantrymen of the New York state national guard departed on trains for the Mexican border and other militia units were on trains expected to move at any hour.

The Seventh, of New York city, 1300 strong, left Jersey City. Several hours earlier 1000 officers and men of the Fourteenth, of Brooklyn, got under way from Peekskill, N. Y. Both are destined for Brownsville.

Harrisburg, June 28.—Private No. 49, of Company E, Eighteenth Regiment, Pittsburgh, with initials "J. H. B." in his hat, was found dying beside the Pennsylvania railroad tracks below Middletown. He was placed upon a train and brought to this city, but died on the way. An autopsy will be held to determine cause of death. The man's pockets were filled with green fruit and medical men expressed the opinion that acute indigestion might have caused death.

PONIES GET BACK AT HAGERSTOWN

Revenge for the Defeat of Monday Secured when Fast Fielding and Timely Hitting Won Game. Rasmussen Pitched.

Turning the tables and reversing the score of the day previous, Plank's Ponies played errorless ball against Bert Weeden's Terriers at Hagerstown on Tuesday and won an exciting game 4-3.

Rasmussen, the Gallaudet College pitcher, was given his first chance to make good and he pitched winning ball for six innings, though he had himself in bad holes several times during the game. Fast fielding saved him at these moments and, with Gettysburg one run ahead in the lucky session, Ira took no chances after the collegian had passed the first man up, but rushed Johnny Mumford to the mound who held the Terriers scoreless.

The game was a beauty. Those Ponies frisked about the field, nailing flies, picking up grounders, and staging throws that had the Hagerstown fans continually in wonderment. Plank made the star play of the game in the eighth. With Smith on third, Walters singled to right and Plank sent the ball like a shot to Koehler who caught Smith several feet from the plate.

The Terriers' runs came as the result of clean hitting. Fielder Dyserst singled to left with one out in the first and scored on Walter's triple to deep center. Hurley scored Monk with a single to left. Their last run came in the third, when Dyserst was hit by a pitched ball, stole second and scored on Walter's single.

Durboraw, first up in the fourth inning, singled sharply to right and went to second when Hurley allowed Smith's throw to get past him. Boyne sent him to third with a single and Stein scored him with another hit to short. Then Ira Plank laid down a perfect sacrifice and both moved up a base. Koehler scored both with a single through Speraw.

Gettysburg won the game in the seventh when, with Koehler on third, Sherman was sent in to bat for Seiffert and rapped a long sacrifice fly to center field that gave Koehler plenty of time to score.

Bunts

Hagerstown fans are quick to appreciate and approve the good plays of visiting teams. Plank got a regular ovation after his throw home in the eighth, even though it meant the loss of the game to the Terriers.

That man Sherman is a wonder with the stick. He scored Koehler in the first game against Hanover here last week in the play which gave Starr opportunity to show his methods; in the next game he broke up the whole proceeding with a timely wallop; Monday he sent out a homer with one on, and Tuesday his long fly to Monk Walters won the game. No wonder that he now ranks second among all the batsmen in the Blue Ridge.

Oyler took Seiffert's place after Sherman had been sent in to pinch hit in the eighth. Muff had one chance and accepted it.

J. A. Holtzworth and C. J. Kimple represented Gettysburg at a hearing before President Jamison on Tuesday regarding Starr's protest on last Thursday's second game with Hanover. Had Starr been put out of the game and fined, clean base ball would have been given to a boost.

Hagerstown Herald: "Rasmussen, a mule lately signed by Gettysburg, was on the mound for six innings and did very well. He had wonderful control on and under hand, which he used with deadly effect on the Terriers."

LETTER FROM H. L. STAHLER

Says Times Account of Topp's Hoar's Leaving Base Ball Team was not Correct. Explains the Whole Situation.

A statement of why "Topp" Hoar left the Gettysburg Base Ball Club, by Mr. H. L. Stahlter, is presented below. Mr. Stahlter claims that the account formerly published in the Times did not present the situation in its proper light. He is an intimate friend of Topp's, and without doubt is in a position to know of his opportunities as described in his letter. The Times disclaims any intention or effort to discredit Hoar's ability; in fact, in former issues has credited him with being one of the best pitchers that ever played with the Gettysburg College team. His record of games won this year clearly indicates that. We are glad of the opportunity to publish Mr. Stahlter's letter which goes into the matter fully so that Topp's friends may know the whole situation.

In your issue of Monday, June 26th, I see on the front page a statement headed—"HOAR LEAVES." The statement as there made is not the truth and, as has been usual with your paper, the slur is made on Mr. Hoar by stating that he "asked more than the ability he had shown would warrant." Your sporting editor evidently has never had, and does not now have, a kindly feeling towards Mr. Hoar.

For two seasons I have been a contributor to the Gettysburg Base Ball Club. I have frequently been told that I was the most liberal supporter it had, but I do not claim any credit for this, as I am not conversant with the facts so far as contributions are concerned. Last year I promised the club my usual contribution—provided they would retain the services of Topp Hoar as one of their pitchers. Manager Plank promised to do this—stipulating a salary which would be satisfactory to Hoar. When the time arrived for Hoar to enter the service of the club and, desiring a thorough understanding, he was told that the Club could not live up to the agreement entered into between him and Manager Plank. The result was that he got employment elsewhere and was paid a much higher salary than the original agreement with the Gettysburg Club called for. He, however, would have preferred to have remained with the Gettysburg Club at a lower salary on account of his many friends in the town. So much for last year—now for this.

Shortly before the close of College Hoar told me that Manager Plank had agreed to pay him $100.00 a month and board to pitch for the Gettysburg Club this season. Your article states that he "was under a Gettysburg contract, but the salary he was to receive was not stipulated." If such a contract existed it was not known to the Players' Committee—at least that is what they told me last Saturday. At any rate what kind of business would it be on the part of a Players' Committee to have a contract with an employee without stipulating his salary? When Hoar told me, before College closed, what Plank had offered him I advised him not to have anything to do with the Gettysburg Club as they would only treat him as they did last year, and I understood last week such was the case. Hoar was offered $60.00 a month more by another Club in New England. He was offered $20.00 more by another Club in Northern Pennsylvania than his agreement with Plank called for. Does this look as if the miserably small sum for which he was to remain with Gettysburg was in excess of the "ability he had shown would warrant." Other Clubs apparently thought that he was worth considerably more than what the Gettysburg Club was willing to pay him.

Now I would like to state how I got mixed up with the matter this year. One day last week the Treasurer of the Club told me he was requested to ask me for a contribution. I replied favorably—not knowing at that time that Hoar was not being treated according to his agreement. The following morning I went to the Treasurer and told him, and several of the Directors, that I would give more than I had in any previous year providing they would live up to the agreement which Plank had made with Hoar. They kept me waiting from Friday morning until Saturday midnight before notifying me of their intentions, and then it was to the effect that they could pay him only $90.00 a month without any board, whereas Plank had promised him $100.00 a month and board, and for the fulfillment of that agreement he would remain in Gettysburg.

Could any one expect Hoar to remain with the Club after they had broken this agreement? I don't think so. I have heard since many favorable comments in regard to Hoar's pitching, and I know that the general community of the town desired his retention, and I have also heard many unfavorable comments on the policy, the action and the bad management shown on the part of the Club.

As to Hoar's pitching your Sporting Editor again shows his antipathy to Hoar by speaking as lightly as possible of the three games in which he pitched, and giving him as little credit as possible. Personally I saw only the game he won, but have been told by hundreds of people that his pitching should have won both the other games but they were lost on account of the lack of ability of other members of the Club.

H. L. STAHLER.

BUSY DAYS AT THE GUARD CAMP

Conditions as Observed by Gettysburg Visitor. Captain Leisenring to Leave Regular Army for Militia.

Despite the reports that the Pennsylvania National Guard is to be moved to the border immediately, the amount of work to be done at Mt. Gretna by way of completing arrangement for the trip will not permit the major portion to move from camp before the end of the week.

Medical inspection is the main cause of delay. The First Brigade was to have left camp Tuesday but its inspection was not completed until late Tuesday afternoon and other preparation will detain them until to-night at least. It was said at Division Headquarters on Tuesday evening that this brigade would probably entrain Wednesday evening although no assurance could be given that it would be moved before Thursday.

Many of the regiments are short of surgeons. Doctors were in demand at the camp Tuesday with no prospect of the demand being filled. With the possible exception of a single company, all are recruited to sufficient strength to permit their being mustered into the Federal service. One company from Easton arrived at the camp with 152 men, two more than the regular war strength. An endeavor was made to have the medical examination postponed until the troops had reached the border but the government insists that a thorough examination of each man be made before his company departs from Gretna.

Captain Frank S. Leisenring, a graduate of Gettysburg College who has many friends in town and is one of the regular army officers detailed to the Mt. Gretna camp, expects to resign his commission and enlist in the Pennsylvania guard with the rank of Major. This announcement was made at the Fourth Brigade Headquarters by General O'Neil on Tuesday evening.

It was welcomed by the officers of the guard generally. Captain Leisenring is known to most of them personally and they are anxious to secure the services of an officer of his qualifications.

It is not thought that the brigades other than the first will be able to leave Mt. Gretna before next week, because of the amount of preparation which remains to be done. The medical inspection is being made in three shifts of eight hours each. One company at a time is marched to the inspector's headquarters and each man is stripped completely naked and gone over carefully. Although there is no delay this requires an amazing amount of time and unless this examination is waived the boys are certain of another Sunday at Gretna.

The camp itself presents a different appearance from the usual summer guard encampments. There are no electric lights through the company streets and even at Brigade Headquarters the old time kerosene lantern does duty while the officers pore over maps of Mexico. No fancy clothes or "comforts of home" take up space in the khaki colored tents. The men do not seem depressed but there is an air of seriousness and expectancy that is lacking at encampments of former days. Even those officers and men who are veterans of the Spanish-American campaign look upon the present crisis as more serious than the one eighteen years ago.

William Armor, with a corps of helpers from Gettysburg, is in charge of the work of laying water pipes to the different parts of the camp. He was selected by General Stewart by reason of his experience with this work at the various Gettysburg encampments.

The equipment is declared by officers, who have had long connection with the guard, to be more complete than at any time during their experience. There was a shortage of blankets at first, due to large supplies having been sent to Plattsburg, but several carloads of these have been sent to Mt. Gretna. It is believed that the inventory of state property to be turned over to the Federal government will be waived, due to the pressing need of men at the front. If this is done it will greatly facilitate the movement. At least several days would be required to itemize this property.

While scarcely anyone is loafing about the big camp, the heads of the different departments have their hands full. In a number of instances these men have worked all night to get things into shape. Major Byers, of Pottstown, with a number of acquaintances in Gettysburg, is one of the men who has been transferred to the Quartermaster's Department in the general shake-up to meet the requirements of the new army bill. In an interview last evening he showed keen disappointment at not being able to be on the line of service when his regiment is called upon.

NEW OXFORD

New Oxford—While Ira Harmon, of Mt. Pleasant township, was turning his automobile around last Saturday evening in New Oxford, he collided with Earl Cooley, who lives at Kling's mill. Mr. Cooley was thrown from the wheel and received minor cuts and bruises. The wheel was wrecked.

The bans of matrimony were published on Sunday for the first time in the Immaculate Conception church between Miss Blanche Staub, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Staub, of near town, and Edward Storm, son of Cletus Storm, of near Irishtown.

Mrs. T. P. Fraser entertained her Sunday School class Saturday at a picnic at "The Forks" along the Big Conewago. There were about twenty five present.

Charles Forry, John Rinehart, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rinehart and children motored to Chambersburg Sunday.

CHAPTER XIII.

Jimmy Knight felt his sister's desertion quite as keenly as did his mother and father, for his schemes, though inchoate, were ambitious, and his heart was set upon them. Lorelei's obstinacy was exasperating—a woman's unaccountable freakishness.

He confided his disappointment to Miss Melcher. "It's pretty tough," complained Jimmy. "I had Merkle going, but she cracked it. Then just as that boob Wharton was getting daffier over her every day she gets her back up and the whole thing's cold."

"You mean it's cold so far as you're concerned," Melcher judiciously amended.

"Sure. She's sore on me, and the whole family."

"Then this is just the time to marry her off. New York is a mighty lonely place for a girl like her. Suppose I take a hand."

"All right."

"Will you declare me in?"

"Certainly."

Melcher eyed his associate coldly. "There's no 'certainly' about it. You'd throw your own mother if you got a chance. But you can't throw me, understand? You try a cross and—the coldest wagon for yours. I'll have you slugged at the morgue."

Jimmy's reply left no doubt of the genuineness of his fears, if not of his intentions. Strange stories were told in the Tenderloin—tales of treachery, published and ingratitude, revenge. Jimmy knew several young men who appeared out of the East side at Melcher's signal. They were inconspicuous fellows, who bore fanciful dime-novel names—and no rustler's strong hold of the old-time western cattle country ever boasted more formidable outlaws than they. Jim knew these gunmen well; he had no wish to know them worse.

"I can't promise anything definite when she's sore on me," he declared. "He's about ready to ask her—she's the one to fix. She hates men, though, and that Merkle story made her crazy."

Melcher pondered for several moments. "I think I know Lorelei better than you do," he stated, deliberately, "and I believe we can pull this off, provided Wharton really wants to marry her. Anyhow, he's so rich it's worth the odds, and she's just the sort to fall for it. Meanwhile I want it understood with your mother that I share in what comes her way."

"I'll fix that," promised Jim.

He found it, in fact, no very difficult task to regain at least a part of his sister's lost esteem, though the process took time. He went about it with the lazy, rattling patience of his kind, heaved himself, kept his mouth shut, and assumed just enough of an injured air to be plausible. He enlisted the aid of his mother and of Lila Lynn, and meanwhile made himself as agreeable as possible to Robert Wharton.

Melcher was as good as his word, and there shortly appeared in the Dispatch an unpleasant rebash of the former story. It was published in connection with the Hammon divorce proceedings, news of which was exciting comment, and it further smirched Lorelei's reputation. Jim was appropriately indignant, but helpless, and Mrs. Knight unwearyingly blamed everything upon her daughter's desertion of the family circle, predicting more evil to follow unless Lorelei came home at once.

She also dwelt upon the fact that Peter was steadily failing and was in immediate need of both medical and surgical attention. The doctor had pronounced sentence, prescribing a total change of living and a treatment by foreign specialists.

In some unaccountable way the story of Nobel Bergman's humiliation became public and afforded the basis for a newspaper article that brought him to Lorelei's dressing room in a fine fury. Even after she had convinced him of her innocence his resentment was so bitter that she expected her dismissal at any time.

Other press stories followed; the girl suddenly found herself notorious; scarcely a day passed without some disagreeable mention of her. Adoree Demorest, as indignant as Lorelei herself, declared finally that her friend must be the object of a premeditated attack directed by some strong hand, and once this suspicion had entered Lorelei's mind it took root in spite of its seeming extravagance. Her good sense argued that she was of too little consequence to warrant such an assault, but her relatives seized the suggestion so avidly as to more than half convince her.

Mrs. Knight attributed this injustice first to Bergman, then to Merkle, whom she hated bitterly since her unfortunate attempt at blackmail; Jim was inclined to agree with her. Mrs. Knight, as always, ended her sympathetic reassurances by saying, "If you were only married, my dear, that would end all our troubles."

The climax of these annoyances came one night after a party at which Lorelei had been presented to an old friend of Miss Lynn's. Lila had introduced the man as one of her girlhood chums, and Lorelei had tried to be nice to him; then in some way he arranged to take her home. The memory of that ride was a horror. She knew now that she was hunted; the man had told her so. She felt like a deer cowering in a brake with the hounds working close. This first attack left her trembling and wary. Her cover seemed pitifully insecure.

Thus far Max Melcher's campaign had worked even better than he had expected; and meanwhile he had employed Jim in assiduously cultivating Bob Wharton and arranging as many meetings as possible between Bob and Lorelei. A short experience had taught Jim to avoid his victim in daylight, for in Bob's sober hours the two did not agree; but once mellowed by intoxication, Wharton became imbued with a carnival spirit and welcomed Jim as freely as he welcomed everyone. Incidentally the latter managed to reap a considerable harvest from the association, for Bob was a habitual gambler, and the courteous treatment he received at Melcher's place seemed to reconcile him to the loss of his money.

When, on the morning after her distressing adventure, Lorelei sent for her brother and demanded vengeance upon her assailant he decided that it was time to test the issue. He pretended, of course, to be ferociously enraged, but on learning over the telephone that the wretch had left the city he declared that there was nothing to be done except perhaps exact an explanation from Lila.

Miss Lynn, however, could offer no excuse. She was heartbroken at the occurrence, but she was too full of her own troubles to give way to her sympathy for others. Jarvis Hammon, it seemed, had heard about the party, and was furious with her.

"You must expect to meet such muckers in this business," she remarked philosophically.

Jim agreed. "I guess you'll have to forget it, sis. Just don't think about it. I'll bring Wharton around tonight, and we four will have supper, eh?"

Lila's hesitation in accepting this invitation seemed genuine, but she acquiesced finally, saying with a short laugh: "All right. Maybe a little jealousy won't hurt my lord and master. He's getting too bossy, anyhow."

When the four set out that night Wharton was in exceptional spirits, and, as usual, devoted himself to Lorelei. For him life was a joyous adventure; he took things as they came, and now that he knew the girl for what she was he did not allow himself the slightest liberty. He was a fervent suitor, to be sure, yet he courted her with jests and concealed his ardor behind a playful raillery.

Jim had ordered supper at a popular Washington Heights inn, and thither the quartet were driven in an open car which he hired in the square before the theater.

It was a charming place for a supper. Contrary to her custom, Lila Lynn allowed herself free rein, and for once drank more than was good for her, rejoicing openly in the liberty she had snatched.

It is a peculiar liberty to sit soberly through a meal and see one's companions become intoxicated. Lorelei watched Lila and Bob respond to the effect of the wine. The whole procedure struck her like her present life as a whole, as both insane and wicked, and she longed desperately to lay hold of something really decent, true and permanent.

Jimmy Knight's admirable hospitality continued; he devoted his entire attention to his guests, he made conversation, and he led it into the channels he desired it to follow. Then, when the psychological moment had come, he acted with the skill of a Tallentire. No one but he knew precisely how Bob's proposal was couched, whence it originated, or by what subtlety the victim had been induced to make it. As a matter of fact, it was no proposal, and not even Bob himself suspected how his words had been twisted. He was just dimly aware of some turn in the conversation, when he heard Jim exclaim:

"By Jove, sis, Bob asks you to marry him!"

In prize-ring parlance, Jimmy had "fainted" his opponent into a lead, then taken prompt advantage to "counter."

Lorelei awoke to her surroundings with a start, sensing the sudden gravity that had fallen upon her three companions.

"What?"

Lila nodded and smiled at the bewildered lover. "That's the way to put it over, Bob—before witnesses."

"Don't joke about such things," cried Lorelei sharply.

"Joke? Who's joking?" Jim was indignant and glanced appealingly at Bob. "You meant it, didn't you?"

"Sure. No joking matter," Bob declared vaguely. "I was just saying that this is no life for a fellow to lead—battling round the way I do; then Jim said—I mean I said—I needed a wife, a beautiful wife. I never saw a girl beautiful enough to suit me before, and he said—"

Jim's relief came as an explosion.

"There! That's English. You spoke a mouthful that time, Bob, for she certainly is a beauty bright. But I didn't think you had the nerve to ask her. If she says yes, you'll be the luckiest man in New York—the whole town's crazy about her."

"We'll make her say yes," Lila added, with drunken decision. "Come, dear, say it." She bent a flushed face toward Lorelei and laid a loose hand upon her arm. "Well? What's your answer?"

Bob fixed heavy eyes upon his heart's desire and echoed: "Yes, what do you say?" More than once in his sober moments he had pondered such a query, and now that it appeared to have taken shape without conscious effort, he was not displeased with himself.

"I say, you don't know what you're doing," Lorelei responded, curtly.

Now, Bob, like all men in his condition, was quite certain that he was in perfect possession of his faculties, and therefore he very naturally resented such an absurd assertion. "Don't you believe it," he protested. "I know what I'm doing, all right, all right."

"A man never speaks his mind until he's ginned," Lila giggled.

"Right! I'm not half drunk yet."

Jim urged the suitor on with a nervous laugh, at the same time avoiding his sister's eyes. "She's stalling, Bob. Make her answer."

"Yes or no?" forcefully insisted the wooer, determined, now, to show his complete sobriety.

"No."

Jim seized Wharton's hand and shook it lustily. "Congratulations, old man; that means yes. I'm her brother, and I know. Why, she told father that you were her ideal, and he said he'd be happy if you two were married. He meant it, too; he's a mighty sick man."

Lorelei stirred uncomfortably, and the faint color in her cheeks faded slowly. "We'll talk about it some other time—tomorrow. Please don't tease the poor man any more. He didn't know what he was saying, and—now, for heaven's sake, talk about something else."

Jim leaped to his feet with a grin and a chuckle, then drew Lila from her chair, saying: "The lovers are embarrassed, and they're dying to be alone. Let's leave 'em to talk it over."

"She's a dear, Bob, and I wish you both joy. But don't kiss her here," said Lila, warningly; then, with a wave of her hand, she turned toward the dancing room with Jim.

"Call us when you've fixed the date," laughed the latter, over his shoulder.

When he and Lila had danced the encore and returned to the table Bob rose unsteadily, glass in hand, and nodded at them.

"Thanks, noble comrades," he proclaimed; "she's mine!"

"Hurrah!" Lila kissed Lorelei ef-

fusively. Jim seized Bob's hand, crying:

"Brother!" He waved to a waiter and ordered a magnum of champagne. "Bring me a wreath of orange blossoms and a wedding cake, too." His jubilation attracted the attention of the other diners; the occupants of a nearby table began to applaud, whereupon Bob beamed with delight.

Lorelei was very white now. She had decided swiftly, recklessly, reasoning that this proffered marriage was merely a bargain by which she got more than she gave. She had accepted without allowing her better self an opportunity to marshal its protests, and, having closed her eyes and leaped into the dark, it now seemed easier to meet new consequences than to heed those higher feelings that were tardily struggling for expression. She did pity Wharton, however, for it seemed to her that he was the injured party. But she was in a wondrous mood tonight, and of late a voice had been desperately urging her to grasp at what she could, that she might, as long as possible, delay her descent into worse conditions.

She heard Lila inquiring: "When does the marriage come off? Right away?"

Bob, who appeared somewhat dazed by the suddenness and the completeness of his good fortune, smiled vacantly. "Any time suits me," he said. "I'm a happy man—little joys are capering all over the place, and old Doctor Gloom has packed his grip."

Jim startled them all by saying, crisply: "Let's make it tonight. I know Bob—he's not the sort to wait."

"Fine! Never thought of that. But—I say—where do they keep these wedding things?" he inquired. "Everything's closed now, and there's nobody dancing at the city hall, is there?" He appealed helplessly to Jim.

Jim rose to the occasion with the same promptitude he had displayed throughout. "Marriages aren't made in heaven any more—that's old stuff. They're made in Hoboken, while the cab waits. Get your things on, everybody, while I telephone." He allowed no loitering; he waved the girls away, sent the waiter scurrying with his bill, helped Robert secure hat and stick, and then dived into a telephone booth as a wood-chuck enters its hole. When he had disposed his three charges inside a taxicab he disappeared briefly, to return with a basket of champagne upon his arm. It is a wise general who provides himself in advance with ammunition.

The smooth celerity with which this whole adventure ran its course argued a thorough preparation on James' part, but Lorelei was in no condition to analyze. Even at the journey's end there was a suspicious lack of delay. The vehicle stopped in a narrow business street, now dark and dismal; its occupants were hurried up a stairway and into a room filled with law-books, where a sleepy justice of the peace was nodding in a cloud of cigar smoke. There followed a noisy shuffling of chairs, some mumbled questions and answers, the crackle of papers, a deal of unintelligible rigmarole, then a man's heavy seal-ring was slipped upon Lorelei's finger, and she knew herself to be Mrs. Robert Wharton. It was all confused, unimpressive, unreal. She was never able fully to recall the picture of that room or the events that occurred there. They formed but a part of the kaleidoscopic jumble of the night's occurrences.

The wedding party was in the cab once more, and it was under way. It was all so like a nightmare that Lorelei began to doubt her own sanity. Once at rest in the dim-lit tunnel of the ferry boat, however, she was brought sharply to herself by hearing her brother exclaim: "Say! He hasn't kissed her yet!"

Lila shrieked, and Bob stiffened himself, then slipped an arm around his bride. As she shrank away he mumbled angrily: "Here! I won't stand for that," and crushed her to him. "You are beautiful—beautiful. And you're mine. She's mine, eh? No foolishness about that, is there?" he appealed to Jim.

As they drew in toward the New York side the chauffeur inquired, "Where to, now?"

"Why, drive us—!" Jim hesitated. There was a silence which Lila broke with a titter.

"Never thought of that," Bob turned again to Jim, who solved the difficulty with a word.

"Why, you're both going to Lorelei's place, of course; then you can make your plans tomorrow."

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employees, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employees for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion, and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railroads be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or
2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act);

ALLIES USING GAS IN NEW OFFENSIVE

Many British Attacks Along Western Front.

FRENCH RECAPTURE TRENCH

German Report Attacks of Great Violence Near Bapaume and Thiaumont Sector.

London, June 28.—Latest despatches give little indication of the general course of events within the past few hours along the Franco-Belgian front where the British artillery has been notably active for two or three days.

The reports, however, lend color to the belief that the long-expected concerted attack by the entente allies on the various fronts is in preparation, if not in actual process of execution.

The German war office in Berlin says marked activity continues in evidence along the Franco-Belgian front held by the British and the northern wing of the French line. Numerous gas clouds are being employed by the entente forces in the operations the war office announced. The artillery fire on the German lines was especially intense in the vicinity of the Somme. In the Verdun region the French fruitlessly attacked German positions on both sides of the Thiaumont redoubt.

The French have recaptured another section of the trenches at Thiaumont in the Verdun sector, according to an official statement issued by the war office in Paris. The struggle for the possession of the village of Fleury is still progressing. Three allied aeroplanes dropped sixty-five shells on German ships near the Belgian coast.

The battle of Verdun, critical, as it is, with the Germans still in possession of Fleury, has become secondary for the moment to the operations developing on the British front.

Although the British war office has not yet chosen to reveal anything concerning them, except in minor detail, the Germans declare the fighting "was important and has run for two days."

The indications of a strong offensive by the British forces are seen in heavy bombardments delivered by British artillery on widely separate points Sunday and Monday. The infantry penetrated the German lines at ten different points Sunday night in night raids.

It is considered significant that the artillery actions were accompanied by attacks on fifteen enemy observation balloons. Six of these "eyes" of the enemy were brought down.

One of the places where the artillery bombardment was the fiercest is opposite the city of Bapaume, held by the Germans. Unusual activity on both sides of the principal road in the city is noted in the British statement. This highway leads from Amiens to the British lines in a northeasterly direction to Bapaume.

The second place of unusual artillery activity is in the Loos sector, about thirty miles further north, and the third around Wytschaete, just south of Ypres.

PLAN WAR BONDS, IF NEEDED

No Change in Revenue Bill to Meet Mexican Possibilities.

Washington, June 28.—War with Mexico, if it comes, will be financed by the sale of "war bonds" of the United States.

Financial leaders of the administration have decided that if necessary they will accept the suggestion of Democratic congressional leaders and raise the money from bond sales, the original issue probably to be $500,000,000.

Conferences between the majority leader, Mr. Kitchin, chairman of the house ways and means committee, which is charged with the duty of keeping the government purse filled, and Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Adoo developed the plan. The house leader made it clear that no effort should be made to supply funds through regular channels of taxation.

50 Too Late to Enlist.

Mahanoy City, Pa., June 28.—Lieutenant Edgar Ditcher, Company E, Eighth Infantry, received orders to close his recruiting office and hasten to Mt. Gretna with the new recruits—eighteen men. Nearly fifty others were at the armory, but the recruiting books had been closed. A Citizens' League to look after the families of soldiers war organized in the high school.

Gets Contract for Twelve Vessels.

Wilmington, Del., June 28.—It was announced here that the Pusey & Jones company, which has recently passed into new hands, has contracts, in addition to the eight boats now under construction, for twelve additional boats. Six are 225 feet long and six 300 feet long.

Cavalry After Austrians.

Milan, June 28.—For three days the Austro-Hungarian army which invaded Italy has been in headlong flight, abandoning wounded, guns and stores. For the first time since hostilities opened Italy is using cavalry for the pursuit of the enemy.

WILLCOX CHOSEN NATIONAL CHAIRMAN

Hughes' Close Friend Will Manage Campaign.

New York, June 28.—The selection of William R. Willcox, former postmaster of New York city and later state public service commissioner, as Republican national chairman was announced. Mr. Willcox was the first choice of Charles E. Hughes.

Acceptance by Colonel Roosevelt of an invitation from Mr. Hughes for dinner was another development that stirred Hughes headquarters. Mr. Hughes sent a cordial letter to the colonel following the endorsement of his candidacy by the Progressive national committee and also wired his appreciation of the action to the committee at Chicago.

Mr. Willcox, the new national chairman, has been long a close friend of the Republican presidential nominee. He was one of the first callers upon Mr. Hughes when the latter arrived in New York from Washington to open headquarters. He is a native of New York state, having been born in Smyrna, Chenango county, 53 years ago.

RUSSIAN POSITIONS LOST

Stormed by von Linsingen's Troops. Front Broken on Road to Kovol.

Berlin, June 28.—Russian positions southwest of Sokul, in Volhynia, have been stormed by General von Linsingen's troops and held against counter attack, according to an announcement of the war office.

Several hundred Russians were taken prisoners. Russian counter attacks were no where successful. (Sokul is southwest of Lutsk.)

German detachments from von Hindenburg's forces which penetrated Russian positions south of Kerkau brought back twenty-six prisoners, a machine gun and a mine thrower. Another detachment, which entered Russian positions north of Mladzios brought back an officer, 188 men, six machine guns and four mine throwers. Many bombs were dropped on the railway freight station at Dvinsk.

The Season's Bathing Suits.

In this model the season's bathing suit expresses itself in plain terms of jersey. Silk braid is summoned to apply the niceties of decoration.

Jersey trimmed with braid is used for this model, which has the neck finished in open effect and short sleeves cut in one with the body. The attached four-piece skirt is plaited. Under the suit is worn knickerbocker bloomers attached to a sleeveless underwaist. In medium size the suit requires 5½ yards 44-inch material, with 5 yards 1-inch braid and ¾ yard 36 inch lining. pastry cups with mixture and heap on top, merching made from three remaining whites and brown.

Fruit Sherbet With Plums.—A delicious fruit sherbet is made with plums. Cut these without peeling and then warm them. Remove the stones, add the juice of a lemon, one cupful of water to one pint of the plum pulp and sweeten with a little sugar and water sirup. Press through a sieve when hot, but not boiling. Cool and add the beaten whites of four or five eggs and freeze. Serve a small plate of plums at each cover with this course. Lady fingers or macaroons are the cake accompaniments.

WAYS OF THE COWBIRDS.

They Think They Can Sing and Won't Build Nests For Themselves.

Just as a man is known by the company he keeps, so this bird is named for the cows which he follows all day. Why the bird prefers the company of the cows has always been a mystery. Once it was thought he ate flies which followed the cows, but recent examinations show that the bird's favorite food consists of weed seeds and grasshoppers. Yet he'll follow the animals all day, sometimes perching on their backs to steal a ride. You've guessed his name, the cowbird.

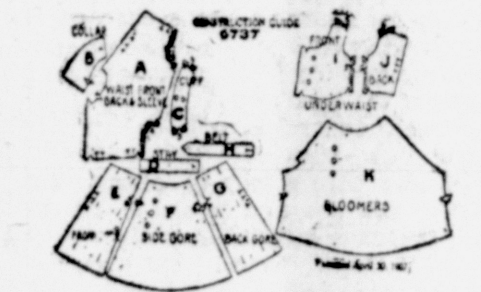

Farmers have learned to value this bird very highly. He destroys millions of harmful insects and quantities of weed seeds. But then he should be able to do a lot of good work for the farmer, because the bird has no family cares.

Mrs. Cowbird, you see, instead of building a nest of her own, lays her egg in the nest of another bird, usually picking out the nest of a bird much smaller than herself. She always depends, too, on the good naturedness of the owner of the nest to hatch the egg and rear the young bird.

Sometimes the owner of the home will push the strange egg out on the ground. The yellow warbler often goes to work and builds another nest over the intruder. Other birds hatch the strange egg, and then spend much time and energy feeding the young bird.

pleasure in making this costume, because it develops quickly and is unusually smart. To make the waist, first close underarm and sleeve seams. Hem the front, then gather the lower edge of waist between double "T" perforations and 2 inches above. Adjust stay to position underneath gathers, center-back even, small "o" perforation at underarm seam; and bring front edge to center-front. Close cuff seam as notched and sew to the sleeve, seams even, then add the collar to the neck. This is simply sewn to the neck edge, with notches and center-backs even.

As soon as the underwaist is ready, start on the bloomers. Close left seam as notched; turn hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations, insert a drawstring. Close center seam from upper edge of back to the extension in front; turn under extension in right front on small "o" perforations, lap on left front to small "o" perforations and stitch to position at lower edge of extension. Sew to lower edge of underwaist, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Now, arrange gores of the skirt together, according to notches; form plaits, creasing on lines of slot perforations, bring folded edges to corresponding small "o" perforations and press. Close seams under plaits leaving edges to the left of center-front free above large "O" perforation in front gore for an opening. Turn under lower edge of skirt 2½ inches for a hem.

Adjust the belt to position and trim with buttons.

Overindulgence in Hope.
Used with due abstinence, hope acts as a healthful tonic; intemperately indulged, as an enervating opiate.—The visions of future triumph, which at first animate exertion, if dwelt upon too intently, will usurp the place of the stern reality; and noble objects will be contemplated, not for their own inherent worth, but on account of the day dreams they engender.—Thus hope, aided by imagination makes one man a hero, another a somnambulist and a third a lunatic and all enthusiasts.—Stephen.

THE GIRL WITH BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Story of a Man's Love and His Disillusionment.

We were both staying at the same summer resort in the mountains, she at the hotel opposite mine. The only young men in the place were a few college students, and I never saw her with any of them. Apparently they were too juvenile for her.

I never tired of looking at her and wondering about her. She was quaint and when I have said that I have said all I can say by way of description.

Her room fronted mine. Before appearing dressed for the afternoon and evening she would stand before her mirror combing her hair. And such hair! It was ravishing. Its depth and length were only to be compared to a high cataract. On one occasion when she was walking from the window I saw that it swept the floor. Every afternoon at 3 I would take my position at my window, close the blind so as not to be observed and watch through the slats for her to display her magnificent tresses.

One evening, returning from a walk in the mountains, I passed the Devil's well. A stream tumbled over a ledge and beneath was a basin which small boys said had no bottom. It was the well. As I approached a woman came from beside it, and through the dusk I recognized "the girl opposite." She was alone and a long way from the village.

"You are out late," I said. "For a woman. Aren't you afraid?"

"The place fascinates me," she replied, with a gasp. "I was dreaming. Is it very late?"

"Eight o'clock, and the twilight is no so long as it was earlier in the summer."

"You are a gentleman; I know you are. There is a freemasonry between ladies and gentlemen which circumstances cannot do away with. I'm sure I can trust you to take me to the hotel."

"You may, certainly."

She put her arm through mine, clinging to me as though frightened at the loneliness of the place. We walked between towering rocks and along the margin of the stream, which now boiled and bubbled and now resolved itself into little lagoons. Coming to a bridge under which it flowed, she stopped and leaned on the rail, but not releasing her hold on my arm. The full moon shone through the narrow gorge.

"Isn't it beautiful?" she said, turning her face to mine.

The moonlight softened her complexion. It lighted her eyes. Her lips were in close proximity to mine. What could I do? What did I do? I kissed them.

"What have you done?" she asked.

"I have trusted to your honor, and you have taken advantage of a poor girl in this lonely spot."

"Forgive me," I said. "The temptation was too much for me. I will not offend again."

"Oh, that you should have forgotten that you are a gentleman!"

"But I will remember it hereafter, and that you are a lady."

She walked on. Not for a moment did she cease to cling to me, leaning more and more upon me as we proceeded. She seemed tired, for, though I bore a great deal of the weight, I could not get her on except at a snail's pace. Every now and again, when we reached a spot where the stream wound far below us and the face of the rock shot up far above us, she would pause and, leaning on a guard rail, look up upon the moonlit scene, apparently forgetful of the hour or her distance from her hotel. And I, too, was forgetful. I forgot more than once that I was a gentleman with a lady under my protection, and a kiss was the result of each failure to remember.

Was it the wildness of the place or the girl that cast a spell over me? At any rate I was bewitched. It was near midnight when we reached her hotel and stood in a dark corner of the piazza. I holding her hand and pouring forth a torrent of words, every one glowing with love. Then after a rapacious kiss she stole into the house while I went across the road and up to my room.

I caught sight of my face in the mirror. My eyes were as wild as the environs of the Devil's well. My heart was beating like a drum. I wondered if the girl was not a denizen of the spot so aptly named. Was not her stay at the hotel opposite a pretense, her real home at the bottom of the well?

As I looked at my excited image the spell fell away and I cursed myself for a fool. Undressing, I got into bed, leaving open the shutter, and the moon shone through the window. I was again in the gorge. We were standing on the bridge. I was enthralled.

The next morning I fled. Before any of the guests had risen I was on a train steaming for the city. When I reached it I dragged myself into the crowded, dingy street and to the deserted house where I lived. There I struggled till midnight to resist a temptation to go back to my enthralment.

In a week I was myself again. During the following autumn I was walking down one of the principal streets of a city when I noticed a crowd about a shop window. I paused and, craning my neck, looked over their heads. Above the entrance was a sign denoting that a marvelous hair restorer was sold within. A woman stood in the window with her back to the spectators combing her hair, which swept the floor. She turned and met the gaze of the crowd with a hardened stare. She was "the girl opposite."

I, too, turned and walked away.

And the Jackass.

Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, and the jackass is a much flattered animal.—Judge.

Japanese Courtesy.
An officer in a Western reserve bank recently got a package from a Japanese firm and with it the following terse information. "We sorry that we cannot prepay duty, for which please accept, though if we could do so without very much trouble and waste time on mutual part we did so," all of which may be somewhat politely jumbled, though here's a venture that he had no trouble understanding that phrase, "for which please accept."
